PENCILLETES.

Chew Jackson's Best Sweet Navy Tobacco
Last day of 1878.

This has been a glorious season for overshoe venders.

Mary Anderson is the attraction for Memphis theater-goers during this week.

Bright and beautiful weather Sunday, with decidedly moderated temperature, but it was of short duration.

The Tennessee Legislature meets in Nashville next Monday. The members are already beginning to wend their way thitherward.

Only one day left in which to balance up and settle up old scores and debts, ready to set in afresh with the new year. Better hurry up.

The city schools, University and other private schools opened out full blast again yesterday, after a week's holiday.

Eight deaths in Chattanooga last week, three white and five colored. In Nashville there were nineteen, ten white and nine colored.

Fast draweth nigh the new-born year, when good resolves burn fiery; and every youth says to himself, "Look here, I'll keep a diary."

The instruments and apparatus for the new Signal Service Station at Chattanooga have arrived and are to be put into operation early this week.

Merchants should not fail to call on Ogdens Brothers for anything they may need in the Blank Book line. They have a very large and complete stock.

The remains of Mrs. Ragsdale, who died of yellow fever near this city last fall, were taken to Chattanooga last Thursday by the friends and re-interred.

The event of the season in colored society at Nashville last week, was the marriage of Arthur D. Langston, son of Dr. Jno. M. Langston, Minister to Hayti, to Miss Ida M. Napier, daughter of Carroll Napier, a prominent colored citizen of Nashville.

The congregations of the First M. E. Church and Church Street M. E. Church, South, united in worship last Sunday morning and night, Dr. Taylor, pastor of the First Church, being absent from the city. Rev. G. C. Rankin, pastor of Church Street, preached in his church in the forenoon, and at night at the First Church, by an agreement with Dr. Taylor.

Removal.

Matt Nelson & Co. were busy all day yesterday moving their immense stock of goods to their new store room on Gay street, next door to J. C. McTeer's clothing house. They will have more room, and will be better able to meet the wants of their large and constantly increasing trade.

A Change at the Weather Office.

Sergeant John K. Payne is ordered to take charge of Signal Station at New London, Conn., where he relieves Sergeant Isaac T. Reed. Private B. T. Hough, of the Signal Corps, U. S. A., formerly of Oswego, N. Y., takes charge of the Knoxville Signal Station. Prof. Payne has made Knoxville his home for several years, in charge of the Signal office and has made many warm friends among us. All will join us in regretting that we are to be deprived of his society and services. He will leave early next week for his new situation.

Sea foam, indeed! You may talk about the froth of the ocean as much as you please, but my ideal is rather found in the lightness and purity of snow," said a lady to her friend. "That's the kind of rolls, biscuit and cake made by that prince of domestic help Dooley's Yeast Powder. I'll use nothing else in my house."

REMEMBER

That notwithstanding the tremendous rush on Christmas, which was fully supplied; Peter Kern has a new and fresh stock of choice Florida Oranges, fresh Oysters, fancy Candies, Nuts, Raisins, Dates, Malaga Grapes, plenty of Ice Cream, &c., &c., for the supply of New Year calls.

Revenue Official Changes.

Capt. Geo. W. Atkinson, an agent of the U. S. Internal Revenue Department, whose residence is at Wheeling, W. Va., has been assigned to duty in this section, with headquarters at Knoxville. He was partly in command of the recent extensive raid into the mountains of Tennessee, Kentucky and Virginia.

Col. John B. Brownlow, of this city, who holds a similar position, has his headquarters now at Louisville, Ky.

THAT REVENUE RAID.

Return of the Raiders—Official Figures of the Results.

Captain G. W. Atkinson, Agent of the Internal Revenue Department, who was general supervisor of the movements, and Deputy Collector W. R. Cooper, who had charge of the Second Tennessee force, together with their men, arrived home Sunday from their extensive raid upon illicit distilleries along the Tennessee and Kentucky border, mention of which was made in our Sunday's issue.

They had no further experience after Cap. W. W. Dunn left them, as mentioned by us. The news went ahead of them into Hancock and the Blackwater country, so that the officers would have been unable to accomplish anything successfully.

The expedition was fourteen days en route, and consisted of the following:

Deputy Collector W. R. Cooper, in charge of the Second Tennessee force, averaging 15 men; Deputy J. M. Davis, with the Fifth Tennessee force, about 30 men; and Special Deputy R. A. Burnside, in charge of the Eighth Kentucky force. Capt. G. W. Atkinson, Revenue Agent, supervised the movements and operations.

In their fourteen days' travel they went over 408 miles, horseback, almost all rough, mountainous country. It was fearfully and bitterly cold all the time. It snowed on them six days, and the sufferings of the raiders were intense.

From the official report made by Capt. Atkinson and Cooper to the Department at Washington, we are permitted to give the following figures of the results of the raid:

They seized 16 distilleries, 5 of which were in Tennessee, 9 in Kentucky and 2 in Virginia. They also captured 15,200 gallons of mash and beer, 1644 gallons of whiskey, 87 gallons of whisky, 45 bushels of malt and 16 bushels of malt, 10 copper stills and casks, 11 worms, and 264 mash tubs. Value of property destroyed, $3,390.

INCIDENTS.

The distillery seized in Lee county, Va., at which a bloody conflict was barely averted, as mentioned by us Sunday, belonged to the notorious Wyley Redman, alias Carmack, who figured about our Federal Court in July, 1877. Deputy Collector Cooper seized a still from him in Lee county, Va., last February. With the exception of demonstrations about this distillery, as reported, no further resistance was offered at any other distilleries on the raid.

Deputy Marshal J. M. Cooper, in attempting to arrest John Loy, of Campbell county, was resisted, whereupon one of the guards shot Loy in the foot, during the raid.

ANOTHER BRANCH OF THE RAID.

The following communication explains itself:

NASHVILLE, TENN., Dec. 28, 1878.

W. R. Cooper, Deputy Collector Second District, Knoxville, Tenn.:

DEAR SIR: I suppose you have got in by this time, and like us have suffered the perils of the winter in that wild country. We reached the head of Rocky Creek the night after we left Jamestown and destroyed the distillery of Blevins, a very large one in Scott county, and the next morning, joined by the Kentucky squad, went down Rocky Creek, found several distilleries and made several arrests. Then we left and went over to Little South Fork, and back to Tennessee, getting about twelve distilleries in our route. We found that there had been a force of sixty-five men organized and were armed to clean out the Kentucky squad, and we saw their tracks in the snow as if an army had passed. I am of the opinion that there are plenty of stills in that part of Kentucky, and that there are plenty of men in readiness to fight for them.

As much of our work is along the line of your District, I would be obliged, and it might be of some service to both of us, if you will have a special deputation sent myself, Capt. J. M. Davis and Capt. Jno. M. Phillips to enable us to do such work as is necessary along the line of our Districts. I am, very respectfully, your obedient servant, S. D. MATHES, Special Deputy and Commissioner.

CONGRATULATORY.

The following is a copy of a telegram received yesterday in reply to the official report made to the Department of the raid:

WASHINGTON, D. C., Dec. 30, '78.

G. W. Atkinson, Revenue Agent, Knoxville, Tennessee:

I am gratified at the success of your operations, and especially that no force or resistance has been met. Please convey the thanks of the office to their officers engaged.

GREEN B. RAUM, Commissioner.

It was certainly a successful expedition, everything considered, and Capt. Atkinson, as well as Deputy Collector Cooper, deserve much credit for the manner in which they conducted it.

Who shot Van Johnson?

Justice Allison's court was engaged all day yesterday in the attempt to make the discovery who shot Van Johnson Christmas night. "Lum" Martin has already been exonerated. Will and Alexander Hommel were each tried yesterday and bound over to court on the charge. Jack Wilds and Bud Gans, who were also charged with implication in the shooting, gave themselves up yesterday, waived examination and gave bond to appear at the Criminal Court next week. Out of all these cases it is thought the mystery can be solved.
